Background: Diet control is the basis of the treatment of type 2 diabetes. However, the cost and practice of diet control for the patient with type 2 diabetes (T2DM) need a lot of manpower and time. In 2009, we have developed a telemedicine model that nutritions analysis and diet control can be done by telephone and then removed. Our system resulted in the improvement of glycemic control of T2DM patients. Recently, the image analysis technology has been developed and it can be used to predict the blood glucose level from the image of the meal. This is called "Smart device application "Asken".

Asken has an AI-powered photo analysis system which analyzes the meal image and calculate the amount of carbohydrates, protein, fat, fiber, and salt in the meal. It also gives the meal item as well as the menu and serving amount. In addition, this application delivers individualized dietary messages and feedbacks. Case report: We report two T2DM cases who were controlled by the diet application "Asken". One case was a 72-year-old man whose HbA1c decreased from 7.2% to 6.6% and weighed from 88 kg to 75 kg in 3 months. The other case was a 60-year-old man whose HbA1c dropped from 7.0% to 6.6% and his weight decreased from 78.0 kg to 76.0 kg in 3 months. Total cholesterol was 140mg/dl to 120mg/dl, triglyceride was 140 mg/dl to 100 mg/dl. Conclusion: Using this application might be useful for diet control of T2DM patients. The effects of AI-supported nutrition intervention using application like this should be further clarified.

in the large number of patients.
